P R E F A C E.

My aim in the following pages has been to attempt a partial Specimen of a compendious, descriptive Catalogue of Original American Works. The necessity for a similar complete Catalogue need not be dwelt upon.

In such a first attempt as the present, perfection is, even under favorable circumstances, hardly to be expected. Circumstances have not, in this instance, befriended me. Ordinary difficulties would have been obstacle enough. The abstention of many publishers was something more. Unless the fact could be attested, it would seem to savor of exaggeration to state, that of over 2000 applications for information made to American authors and publishers touching works written or issued by them, only 300 succeeded in eliciting an answer.* This is, however, the case. The remainder were treated as though the matter in question were totally foreign to the interests of those addressed. I risk nothing in asserting that it was not.

It must further be stated that such defects as may exist in these pages, are mainly attributable to the imperfect character of some of the returns made by authors and publishers, which it was out of my power to control, inasmuch as the works themselves, by which alone these returns could be properly checked, were not before me.

Subsidiary to the main purpose of this Specimen is another, that of inviting a full and unreserved expression of opinion upon the best method of cataloguing American books.

The following explanatory observations may not be out of place, in reference to the course pursued in this compilation.

The method generally adopted of transposing the christian and surnames of authors, has been departed from in this Catalogue, in order to render it uniform with all my other Catalogues, and also from the conviction that the difficulty, inherent in the other system, of distinguishing the two classes of names may, by the adoption of the present plan, be avoided.

The explicitness here noticeable in all necessary details is due to the idea that it increases the value of a Catalogue for purposes of reference.

Clearness and brevity have been consulted by the use of Abbreviations, to the understanding of which the following explanations may contribute.

It will, of course, be understood that each work consists of but one volume, and is in its first edition, unless otherwise stated.

The Abbreviations may be divided into four classes. The first class embraces those used for the christian names of authors, and stand:

Ab. for Abraham.	Freem. for Freeman.	Ol. for Oliver.
Ad. " Adolphus.	G. " George.	Or. " Orlando.
Alb. " Albert.	Gu. " Gustavus.	Pa. " Paul.
Al. " Alexander.	H. " Henry.	P. " Peter.

Fran. " Francis.	Nathl. " Nathaniel.	Wa. " Walter.
Fr. " Frederic.	Ni. " Nicholas.	Wash. " Washington.
Fri. " Friedrich.	No. " Noah.	W. " William.

Where a name is unknown, or not usually written in full, the initials are followed by a colon (:). The sign † indicates that the author died before January 1873.

The second class of Abbreviations deals with the size of books, which they thus represent:

fo. Folio.—4. Quarto.—roy. 8. or imp. 8. Large size Octavo.—cr. 8. Crown Octavo.—8. Octavo.—12. Duodecimo, &c.

* The blank forms sent to authors and publishers embraced the following queries: 1. Author's Christian Name—2. Author's Surname—3. Was the Author living in January 1873?—4. Author's Pseudonym—5. Full Title as printed on the Title Page—6. Number of Volumes—7. Size—8. Number of Pages—9. Illustrations, Maps, etc.—10. Style of Binding—11. When first issued—12. Number of Edition which was for sale in 1873—13. Retail Price—14. Publisher's Firm—15. Subject Matter (not fully expressed in the title), with which the publication is mainly occupied, and the various headings under which it should be referred to in the Index.

The Abbreviations of the third class embrace everything else descriptive of books, and signify:

Certain other signs used in this compilation are thus explained:

The figure or figures following the title or number of volumes, indicate the size.

In the date of first issue, the apostrophe (') stands for the first two figures of the present century.

Cases in which reliable information could not be got, are pointed out by the query (?).

The numeral indicating which edition was for sale in 1873, is separated from the date of first issue by a short perpendicular line (|).

Then follow successively the style of binding, price and Publisher's name.

Translations, or works edited by others than the original authors, are sometimes better known by the name of the translator or editor. In this Catalogue, therefore, to facilitate reference, all such translators' and editors' names are also given in their proper alphabetical order, and certain works will consequently be found under two or more names.

The bulk of this compilation, I may say in conclusion, by no means represents the pains bestowed upon it, nor the labor and ungratefulness of the task it involved; may I be allowed to hope that it will in some measure attain the aim with and for which it is published?
